- I find the course very well organized and the lectures are very useful and inspiring. Although some parts are delivered in a technical way that people without certain knowledge find it hard to follow (like the one on welfare economies). It would be even better if the lecturer could take the background of participants into consideration and adjust these
- day 1 and 4 had very good lectures
- I'm very grateful for this well-organized workshop. I'm doing research in consumer psychology and the view of wellbeing in the eyes of economists really gives me a lot of beliefs that my focus is not trivial. I hope I can find some ways to work on the concept of wellbeing and hopefully get interdisciplinary impact.
- Great course format. Enjoyed the in-person interaction a lot!
- The course was extremely well organised, informative and clear. Thank you.

Do you have general comments on the course or specific proposals for improvement?

- if all the lectures could take place in the same week, travel arrangement would be easier.
- If the 4 days are consecutive (in one week), maybe more people could attend in person
- The theoretical parts were very clear and informative. I think from an economics point of view the discussions were interesting. However, there are vast array of (in my opinion) more developed theories on well-being and social justice emerging in other fields, which would also broaden the conceptualizations and analysis between innovation and well-being. Hence, I think the course was especially useful for understanding the innovation economics perspective, but in the sense of dwelling into more nuanced understandings of well-being the course was lacking some insights.
